Read the passage below and answer questions 41-50

Ten years ago, a man received his retirement money and decided to build six rental houses on his land. The work went on well but when the houses were half built, the money got finished. For many years, the incomplete buildings remained unused and did not bring in any income.

They also gave him alot of headache and showed that he did not have a good plan. Recently, he sold two of the incomplete houses and got enough money to finish the other four.

Clearly, you should have a good plan of what you want to do and how you will do it before you start. Plan and plan properly. When you start something, make sure you complete it properly. Some pupils have a habit of starting maths problems but before they get the final answer they stop. Others start writing a composition but halfway through they lose interest. Instead of finishing the composition, they try to read a storybook. After reading two pages they remember it is time for a favourite programme on television and so they stop reading.
