

- a) Distributive justice – This is the type of justice which is practiced when goods/resources are distributed fairly to many people who have legitimate claim to them.
- b) Commutative justice – This is practiced when people as individuals give their colleagues, friends and clients what is due to them fairly and rightly e.g it is demanded of traders and professionals to give their clients the right amount of goods/services paid for.
- c) Social justice – This refers to justice which is concerned with relations between individuals. It is concerned with personal relations in the community and public places. Absence of discrimination in associating with others despite of tribe, race, creed etc.
- d) Legal justice – This is practiced when law is applied to guide in working/applying judgment about disputing parties. Legal justice is normally enforced by the law enforcement agencies of society.

14.3 ADVICE TO TEACHERS

- a) Cover all the topics of the syllabus.
- b) Ensure that teaching is interactive.
- c) Train candidates to read and understand questions before they attempt them.
- d) Encourage wide reading of relevant materials.